

Exhibit A: Approved Preliminary Design

Blessing Hancock's Preliminary Design is inspired by the park's natural environment and recreational activity and the families that gather there. A series of curvilinear bands come together to create a figure-eight like form representative of community and creative play. The painted steel surface combines a triangle pattern and linear text cut into metal strips. The included text will be collected from the local community to create a cohesive storyline and educational opportunity. The sculpture is designed to stand twelve feet in height, eighteen feet in length and ten feet in width. Shadows from the triangle and text patterns will be a prominent feature during the day and offer interactivity as you move around and through it. The sculpture will be located near the tot playground area to take advantage of the activity happening in the park.
