Exhibit A: Approved Preliminary Design

Mark Reigelman's artwork for the Las Vegas Trail Roundabout, entitled Right Turn Only, is a vortex formed of condensed traffic arrows that spiral in on themselves and twirl upward toward the sky. Drawing upon the roundabout's cyclical motion the playful artwork nods to the directional safety signage that will be part of the roundabout. It also respectfully acknowledges the rich aeronautical history found in the community, by referencing the circular air patterns that are generated by the wingtips of ascending airplanes. The spiraling form acts as a traditional symbol of growth, rebirth and ascension. Comprised of hundreds of bright blue aluminum arrows supported by a hidden steel substructure, the artwork gracefully touches the roundabout and extends upwards 20 feet, a bold and whimsical landmark for this diverse and evolving community.
